OUR GARDEN FLOWERS

Author of "Our Native Trees" and "Our Northern Shrubs."

A popular study with those qualities of clearness, thoroughness, and charm of style that have made her other books famous.

"This book," says its author in her preface, "is the outcome of a life-long search for a volume with which one might make a little journey into the garden, and become acquainted with the dwellers therein; their native land, their life history, their structural affiliations."

"Among the many species of a genus it has often been necessary to select but one for description. As a rule the choice has been either the typical form or the one longest in cultivation, or the greatest favorite."

Full of practical, tested, systematically arranged, and well indexed information. With 96 full-page illustrations from photographs and 186 illustrations from drawings.

"A profusion of well-executed illustrations in half tone and line add to the usefulness of a volume which must be considered practically indispensable to the amateur gardener."—The Dial.

The Silent Call

By EDWIN MILTON ROYLE

A story of the Squaw Man's son, by the author of the eminently successful drama, "The Squaw Man."

The hero—the Squaw Man's son—is a half-breed whose father was an Englishman of noble family. He was educated in the English schools, and trained for the army, but when this novel opens he has heard the "Silent Call," and is back near the ranch where he was born. Beyond all, this is his love story, written with all the emotional intensity and delicate feeling that distinguished the "Squaw Man."

Illustrated. $1.50

The Head Coach

By RALPH D. PAINE Illustrated. $1.50

"How the coach won out is a tale of plenty of incident and excitement to suit any foot ball enthusiast, which is saying a good deal. And, it may be added, the romance is not all of the gridiron."

—Minneapolis Journal.

Danbury Rodd, Aviator

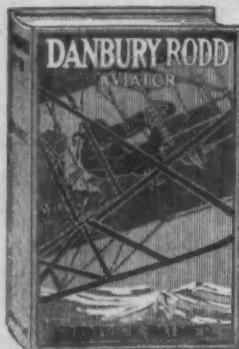

A Great Flying-Machine Story

By FREDERICK PALMER. Illustrated. $1.50

"Rodd's native heath is the air, and the possibilities that lie not far ahead as suggested in these stories are full of thrill and charm."—Baltimore News.

"From the first getting up into the space of the speedy aeroplane, Falcon, in the exhilarating novel, 'Danbury Rodd,' until the end of the last flight, more than 300 pages away, interest is as swift as the airship whose speed was close in touch with a mile a minute. It is one of Frederick Palmer's best stories."—Boston Globe.

"Danbury Rodd has so mastered the science of aerial navigation that he is king of the air. He takes chances that would daunt even the bravest of men, and the episode in which the young woman he loves risks her life in trying to save the lives of both is a most thrilling one."—Springfield Union

Philippa at Halcyon

By KATHARINE HOLLAND BROWN

She has transferred to her pages the actual atmosphere of a girls' college—the very spirit of the girl undergraduate. Nowhere is so true and so charming an impression given of girls' college life. Upon the scene—a Western college—are thrown varied girl characters who, with Philippa, herself a character of great fascination, pass through episodes exciting, interesting, and amusing.

Illustrated. $1.50

Little Aliens

By MYRA KELLY

Third Edition. Illustrated. $1.50

Here for the last time the children of the East Side, with their queer notions and their picturesque manner of talk, are made to live in print.

"The scenes are not in the school-room, however, but among the children in their homes and on the streets. All the humor and tenderness, all the fun and gentle pathos of the earlier stories distinguish these."—Philadelphia Press.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

By FRANCIS LYNDE

A Great Railroad Romance by a Former Railroad Man. Illustrated. $1.50

"It is a tale bristling with action. Lidgerwood, Ford, Bradford, and Hallock are characters vividly drawn from life."—Rochester Post-Express.

"An interest-gripping, well told story of great power, as full of blood-quickenning adventure as a fig is of seeds, runs between the margins of 'The Taming of Red Butte Western.'"—Boston Globe

"Always something is happening or just about to happen in Francis Lynde's story, 'The Taming of Red Butte Western,' and the reader's mind is held in interest or suspense to the end of tale."—N.Y. World

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, NEW YORK

MacGrath's
Best Novel

A SPLENDID HAZARD

By Harold MacGrath

Author of The Man on the Box, etc.

"A romance rich in exciting detail. Writing confessedly and purely for the diversion of his readers, Mr. MacGrath has never written more effectively."—New York World.

"As delightful a love romance as any that has come from MacGrath's fertile brain. Many readers will regard it as his best."

—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

"The most daring of MacGrath's stories."—Grand Rapids Press.

"'A Splendid Hazard' is unflagging in its fascination."

—Savannah Press.

"Vivacity, humor, and entertainment are in the new MacGrath story."

—Boston Transcript.

Blaze Derringer

By EUGENE P. LYLE, JR.

Author of "The Missourian," etc.

Illustrated. Net, $1.20 (postage 12c.)

When Blaze is requested to resign from College, he goes home to his father's ranch in Texas and has an interview with the head of the family. The upshot is that he sets out with $5,000 and the promise that two ciphers will be added to this allowance if he returns with it at the end of two years. The time has almost expired when a strange event takes Blaze Derringer to South America. The story is fascinating and full of dramatic situations.

It will repeat the success of "The Lone Star" and "The Missourian," now in their thirteenth and twentieth thousands, respectively.

Water Goats

And Other Troubles

By ELLIS PARKER BUTLER

Author of "Pigs is Pigs," "That Pup," etc.

Perhaps you are not acquainted with Water Goats. Neither were the aldermen of Jeffersonville. And thereby hangs the tale. Alderman Toole said they were the same as gondolas—or, as he had it, dongolas. This discovery was tragic in its consequences.

Answer this for yourself: Of six volumes by Mr. Butler there have been sold 267,800 copies. What will be your share of "Water Goats and Other Troubles"?

Second Large Edition

Routledge Rides Alone

By WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT

"Here is one of the strongest novels of the year; a happy blending of romance and realism, vivid, imaginative, dramatic, and, above all, a well told story with a purpose. It is a red-blooded story of war and love, with a touch of the mysticism of India, some world-politics, love of country and hate of oppression—a tale of clean and expert workmanship, powerful and personal. No other volume published in 1910 is being accorded so much attention from the critics."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Raleigh A Spirited Romance of Elizabeth's Court

By WILLIAM DEVEREUX and STEPHEN LOVELL

"As a romance the story is entitled to rank with the best of Stanley Weyman's novels, while its historic worth is far greater."

The Heart of Desire

By ELIZABETH DEJEANS

Author of "The Winning Chance."

"The book is a tissue of mysteries, quite apart from the ordinary usages, but solved in the end satisfactorily."—Chicago Tribune.

"There is color, vitality, and freshness in the picture, and charming variety of detail in the development of the story. Horton is the ideal lover, strong-hearted, wilful, persevering; and Kate is the vivid, tantalizing, impersonal creature in an armor of secrecy. But the author transforms this woman into a being of rarest and most beautiful human qualities—or rather, brings those latent emotions to the fore."—Boston Evening Transcript.

"THE HISTORY OF MR. POLLY" Second Edition

"Mr. Polly stands for thousands of men and women who are cloistered as hopelessly by their environment as if they were behind stone walls. As a human document, reciting the revolt of a soul against its fate, 'The History of Mr. Polly' is a great book."—Detroit Free Press. $1.50

Geraldine Bonner

"THE EMIGRANT TRAIL" Second Edition

"Geraldine Bonner has done a great piece of work in 'The Emigrant Trail.' It is an epic of the pioneers, and no stronger one has been attempted or accomplished. From the beginning to the end no smallest detail is missing, and it is difficult to believe that a writer of this generation, and a woman, has told this vigorous, masterful story."—San Francisco Call. $1.50

Concerning
The Trade List Annual
1910

PUBLISHERS who have not as yet arranged for the insertion of their catalogues in the TRADE LIST ANNUAL FOR 1910 are urgently requested to give the matter prompt attention, as all lists must be delivered on time to the Tapley Bindery. While the major lists are generally ready on time, frequently there are delays in arranging for the insertion of the smaller lists which are so essential to the complete usefulness of the Annual. The publishers of one, two or a dozen books are especially requested to write at once regarding the matter and learn how to have the titles of their books included in this, the most widely used of all trade reference books. These short lists are indexed in a special alphabet, and for this purpose prompt information is required.

FOR PUBLISHERFOR BOOKSELLER

Two Valuable Mailing Lists

We are offering the booktrade two new and very useful mailing lists.

One is a directory of all the public and semi-public libraries in the United States and Canada, whose yearly appropriations for book purchase make it worth while sending them your catalogues and circulars. There are over one thousand entries giving the name of the librarian, the number of volumes in library, total yearly income, and the amount spent for books last year.

The other is a directory of booksellers in the principal towns of the United States and Canada, with street addresses in larger cities, and the dealer's specialty, if he has one, mentioned. It does not include small towns, or the little fry in big towns. It might be called a "traveller's list of people to see." There are more than two thousand entries arranged by states.

Would either of these lists interest you? If so, send for the "Annual Library Index, 1909" ($5.00), which includes the library list, and the "Annual American Catalog, 1909" ($3.00), which includes the booksellers' list.

THE ILLUSTRIOUS PRINCE

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

The critics appear to agree that this new story of international intrigue is, to quote,

"By far the best and most important novel Mr. Oppenheim has written."

One literary editor in a personal letter to the publishers says:

"Let me thank you for the personal pleasure I took in reading this well-written and swiftly moving story ['The Illustrious Prince'].

"It is one of the few bits of present day fiction that I have actually read with a keen sense of interest."

LITTLE, BROWN & CO., Publishers, Boston

The New Novel by the Author of "Together"

"A Life for a Life"

By ROBERT HERRICK

Cloth, $1.50

The New Novel by the Author of "Together"

By the Author of "Together," etc. "Mr. Herrick writes with the brilliancy and fearlessness of a Balzac, and the keenness of his analysis is worthy of a study by Ibsen. He simply graphically pictures conditions that he believes exist to-day in America."—From a review of his novel "Together."

The New Novel by the Author of "Together"

By the Author of "The Common Lot," etc. "The greatest novel of American life yet written," was the mature verdict upon his "Together." As summed up by the Danish critic Nielson, "Mr. Herrick is one of the few living authors whose work really counts, and is to be accepted as an authentic representation of life."

A REAL BOOK

A GREAT NOVEL

"Nathan Burke"

By MARY S. WATTS

is a long novel, but that should not discourage you. It means the more enjoyment as you read and re-read the book. It is a book that is going to live—that your children, yes, and your grandchildren are going to enjoy. Yes, it is a historical novel and you flatly refuse to read any more historical twaddle. But Kingsley's HYPATIA is a historical novel, so is Churchill's THE CRISIS, and you were thankful for them. Hosts of imitators these great books had; hence twaddle, hence your disgust of the historical novel. But you will read Nathan Burke, because it is too big, too real, too interesting, to pass by, and you will say as other of its readers do, "I'd like to read it right over again." Also, it is published by THE MACMILLAN COMPANY, and even in these days of the reckless praising of poor fiction our earnest belief that you will feel rewarded by reading it means something.

NOTES IN SEASON.

SIR HERBERT TREE has made arrangements to produce a dramatic version of Alfred Noyes's "The Forest of Wild Thyme" at His Majesty's Theatre at an early date. It is reported also that arrangements are being made for its production in America.

A. C. McCLURG & Co. have secured the prize in "T. R. in Cartoons," by McCutcheon, to be ready on June 18, just when the ex-President is once more among his enthusiastic fellow citizens. This is a good selling proposition. The famous cartoons of the Chicago Tribune are known throughout the land.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & COMPANY announce two books for publication June 15. "Blaze Derringer," by Eugene P. Lyle, Jr., is the story of a young man who is requested to leave college and returns to his father's Texas ranch. From there he starts out with $5000 and the promise that two ciphers will be added to this allowance if he returns with it at the end of two years. His quest takes him at the eleventh hour to South America and many adventures. The other book is "Water Goats and Other Troubles," by Ellis Parker Butler, author of "Pigs is Pigs," and tells of the tragic consequences which befell the aldermen of Jeffersonville who knew not what a water goat might be.

DUFFIELD & COMPANY announce that they will publish Rostand's "Chantecler" in book form on August 15. Recent magazine advertisements, therefore, stating that the play can be read in English only in its serial form are misleading. The sales of H. G. Wells's "The History of Mr. Polly" and Geraldine Bonner's "The Emigrant Trail" have been so large that second editions have already been necessary. In Helen Marshall Pratt's "Cathedral Churches of England" this house has an extremely compact and thorough book which deals with the entire thirty-two cathedrals or cathedral churches of the United Kingdom, thus making a most useful guide and reference book for travellers or stay-at-homes.

THE Lippincotts published last week a popular study of "The Laws of Life and Health," by Dr. Alexander Bryce, an English physician. His design is to supply popular information in non-technical language on the vital problems concerning food, drink, work and rest, air and exercise, cleanliness, etc., and he has produced an interesting as well as an instructive treatise. Two other recent issues from the Lippincott press have to do with natural or applied science. "Chats on Electricity," by Frank Broadbent, is for the general reader exclusively, and is uniform with a similar volume brought out earlier in the year—"Chats on Astronomy." The other—strictly technological—is "Hydrographic Surveying," the work of Commander Stuart V. S. C. Messum, a retired officer of the British navy.

THE YOUNG CHURCHMAN Co., Wisconsin, call special attention to their newest books. "The Historians and the English Reformation," by the Rev. John S. Littell, refutes the misrepresentations of English church history which appear so frequently in the secular histories of England; "Ober-Ammergau and the Passion Play" is a practical and historical handbook for visitors by Rev. Dr. E. Armitage Day; and "Holy Wedlock" contains the marriage service of the Protestant Episcopal Church in old Missal style, gotten up in three styles of binding, the one in white kid leather being especially suited for a bride as a souvenir of her wedding day. Other books for which there is steady sale are "Everyman's History of the English Church," by the Rev. Percy Dearmer; "John Keble," by Hon. Edward F. L. Wood, All Souls College, Oxford; "History, Authority and Theology," by Rev. A. C. Headlam; and "Roman Catholic Opposition to Papal Infallibility," by Rev. W. J. Sparrow Simpson.

First describes Lessing's "Laokoon," the great German critic's protest against the influence of the French on the literature and art of his day. Professor Babbitt traces from its beginnings in writers like Rousseau and Diderot to the present time another confusion of the arts from that attacked by Lessing. His subjects are word-painting, programme music and color-audition. He closely defines the terms classic, pseudo-classic and romantic, and ends with a plea for a reaction against certain modern tendencies. The main conclusions of the volume have been presented for the past decade to Professor Babbitt's students at Harvard University.

Nature drawing here is limited to plant models and the points of view are those of the requirements of schools. The description of the accomplishment by children is helped out by many pictures, some in colors, which show remarkable ability. The book should be helpful and encouraging to all instructors of drawing in the public schools. Mr. Bailey is editor of The School Arts Book, and with one exception these papers have appeared in that magazine.

This adds another title to the list of this author's stories. "Wee MacGregor" and "Oh! Christina." The master, Joseph Redhorn, is a shrewd, cautious Scot with a remarkable patience and endurance in overlooking his apprentice's blunders. The sensitive vanity of a man who realizes he is not endowed with beauty or the graces, and the unintentional wounds he suffers therefore, while he consoles himself with a simple characteristic Scotch philosophy, will furnish subject matter for an hour's recreation.

Both authors were close friends of Governor Johnson's, Mr. Day being his secretary. Born to a life of poverty and hardship, young Johnson early began a struggle to support himself and his mother. "The career of John A. Johnson was remarkable; the story of his early hardship and poverty, of his manly struggle to support himself and his mother, of his education and training for life, of his elevation three successive times to the governorship in a state strongly opposed to his political party, of his national reputation, which indicated that he might some day be called to the presidency of the United States, is a story which carries with it many a lesson for the boys and young men of America."—Introduction. The book was first published by Forbes & Co., but is now to be had of Day & Knappen, who handle it for Mrs. Johnson's benefit.

Dewey, Daisy. Problems of your generation; the author claims but to have been privileged to transmit the following chapters. N. Y., Arden Press, 122 E. 25th St., 1910. c. 104 p. D. hf. cl., $1.

The author claims but to have transmitted the chapters of the book, the source of her inspiration seeming to be minds or individuals from another sphere who appear as "we" throughout the work. The problems are 1, the mysteries of life; 2, the creative forces; 3, evolution; 4, the soul of life. The conclusions are that all life is from God and man's destiny is the fulfillment of his soul's progress for eternity. Currents from the Beyond will constantly stimulate man's mind if he will allow them ingress.

"Is it according to the Scriptures of the New Testament, or is it by the teaching of the Scriptures according to the will of God, that there should be a variety of churches, living side by side, in a state of separation one from another? Is there any society in these lands which can make good a claim to be regarded as the Church of England, in a sense such as cannot in strictness be applied to other so-called churches which live round about?" These are some of the questions considered in this book. Page references.

The liberty here referred to is freedom from illness, the author having suffered from neuralgia and gout for many years. She believes that perfect co-ordination of matter, mind and spirit, with the two higher in control, is health, and it is the possibility of the attainment of this co-ordination that she seeks to explain. Having been cured herself by mental healing, the laying aside of fear and the dwelling on hope, encouragement, and the goodness and ever-present help of God Miss Granger has written this pamphlet to help others to true health.

Later she becomes a woman minister, her husband having told her, dying, that this should be her vocation.

Harden, E. Walker. The cost of living to railways; from the Outlook, Apr. 9, 1910. [Chic., E. Walker Harden, 137 Adams St., 1910.] O. pap.

At one time financial editor of the Chicago Tribune, Mr. Harden has studied financial and commercial conditions in America and the Far East. To-day, when increased railway rates are being almost universally execrated, this article will be of interest showing, as it does, how the increased cost of iron, timber, labor, etc., make the expense of operating a railroad so great that rates must inevitably go up.

Harvey, Nathan A. Mental ontogeny; the psychology of infancy, childhood and adolescence. Ypsilanti, Mich., Nathan A. Harvey, State Normal College, [1910.] c. 106 p. O. pap.

Mental ontogeny is the entire series of changes that occur in the development of the mental life of a single child from the time it is born until it reaches the adult stage. The book aims to point out a method by which the psychical processes of a child may be interpreted and understood. The fundamental instincts that discriminate the periods of childhood, and how the characteristic activities of childhood may be interpreted by them, are here considered. Author is professor of pedagogy, State Normal College, Ypsilanti, Mich.

Herrick, Rob., 1868-. A life for a life. N. Y., Macmillan, 1910. c. 433 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author of "Together," that arraignment of American married life, now puts the "writing on the wall" for the business world of the day, the worshippers of property, the destroyers of even human life if it bars the way of its attainment. A founding starts as a bank clerk in the great city, is later used to build up a great Power Company, learns the methods of exploiting mines, railroads, in which "a life for a life" almost is the price. He suddenly awakes and abandons his future and tries to fight for things that will last even after earthquakes and thunderstorms and great fires have destroyed great cities. The call again goes to woman. She is man's first desire and she has power to give him noble aims.

Mr. Kelly was late lecturer on municipal government at Columbia University, and author of "Government or human evolution." A comprehensive view of Socialism with an exposition of the way by which it is to be attained. The author feels that the men elected to govern us have persistently made false and misleading statements regarding Socialism, and it is these statements, particularly those of Mr. Roosevelt in his Outlook articles, that Mr. Kelly combats. The three parts of the book are: What Socialism is not; What capitalism is; What Socialism is. Under these heads specific information and statements are given which produce a good picture of present-day conditions from the Socialist's standpoint.

North, Arth. Walbridge. Camp and camino in lower California: a record of the adventures of the author while exploring peninsular California, Mexico; with a foreword by Admiral Robley D. Evans. N. Y.,

Baker & Taylor, 1910. c. 346 p. O. cl., $3 net.

The title of this book contains one word which will be puzzling to the average American. "Camino" is a Spanish word used to describe the difficult trails which now throng the land of mountain and desert in Lower California. It is a singular fact that this country, although adjacent to United States territory, has been better known to globe trotting Englishmen in search of adventure and big game hunting than to Americans. Mr. North is called the greatest living authority on the country he describes. His book is written from his own experience and illustrated with photographs taken by himself. Appendix and index.

Editor is the Chichele Professor of modern history in the University of Oxford, Fellow of the British Academy, and president of the Bristol and Gloucestershire Archaeological Society. This series is designed to meet a demand for something between school manuals or minute monographs. It is intended to give something more than a mere outline of natural annals, but devotes little space to controversy or the discussion of sources. Each volume will be by a specialist in the history of the period treated. Index.

Paddock, Wendell, and Whipple, Orville B. Fruit-growing in arid regions; an account of approved fruit-growing practices in the inter-mountain country of the western United States, comprising the states of Colorado, Montana, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, and in Northern Arizona and New Mexico, with applications to adjacent regions. N. Y., Macmillan, 1910. c. 20+395 p. D. cl., $1.50 net.

First author is professor of horticulture, and second, field horticulturist in the Colorado Agricultural College and Experiment Station, Fort Collins, Colo. Many people who have no experience with fruit growing have gone into the inter-mountain region of the country and planted orchards. It is for the instruction of these people, in the art of irrigation, planting and tending of their orchards, that this book is primarily designed. The chapters cover such necessary ground as, location, exposure, soils, preparation of land, planting pruning, propagation of orchard trees, tillage of orchards, fertilizers and shade-crops, irrigation in orchards, picking and packing fruit, marketing, frost injuries and protection, orchard pests and their control, etc. Index.

Peabody, F: W: The religio-medical masquerade; a complete exposure of Christian Science. Bost., Hancock Press, [P. O. Box 2789, 1910.] c. 197 p. D. cl., $1.

A book which absolutely condemns Christian Science and its founder. Mr. Peabody is a Boston lawyer who for ten years has been investigating Mrs. Eddy and Christian Science, having conducted several cases against her, one in the interest of her son, which resulted in her having to pay him (the son) about $300,000. Contents: The sacrifice of children; The detached heart; Pretended equality with Jesus; The faked "revelation"; The fiction of God's authorship; A sham "religion"; A bogus healing system; Immeasurable greed; The Eddy autocracy; The "string" on the gifts; The Eddy ban on marriage; Christian Science witchcraft.

Plunkett, Sir Horace. The rural life problem of the United States; notes of an Irish observer. N. Y., Macmillan, 1910. c. 11+174 p. D. cl., $1.25 net.

The substance of this book appeared in five articles in The Outlook under the title "Conservation and rural life." The fact that the city has been developed to the neglect of the country is the basic idea of the work. The causes and remedies are considered sanely and clearly by the author, who has an intimate knowledge of the Irish land question and whose ten years' residence in America, where he studied our conditions, have qualified him for speaking more or less authoritatively on the subject. Contents: The launching of two Roosevelt policies; The origin and consequences of rural neglect; The inner life of the American farmer; The weak spot in American rural economy; The way to better farming and better living; The two things needful. The final chapter says the situation demands two things: an association, popular, propagandist, organizing, and an institute, scientific, philosophic, research-making.

Prescott, De Witt Clinton. Early day rail-roading from Chicago; a narration with some observations. Chic., D. B. Clarkson Co., [1910.] c. 265 p. pls. pors. D. cl., $1.50.

This book, dedicated to the railroad boys of America, contains many stories of their predecessors, is neither statistical nor descriptive of the country through which the railroad passes, but dwells more on the stories of the men who run the trains. The last chapter is devoted largely to the question whether "to drink or not to drink" is best.

These letters give in an informal interesting way the record of an extensive trip through China. The description of a trip up the Yangtse in a native boat, through the many dangerous rapids, with the vivid pictures of native life along the banks and in the river towns, tells of a part of the country not visited generally by women tourists.

Ross, Will Monroe. My personal experience with tuberculosis. Stevens Point, Wis., W. M. Ross, 1910. c. 64 p. S. pap., 50 c.

The author had tuberculosis and went to the Southwest to be cured, but owing to the false idea he then entertained, that climate alone would work a cure, he was not benefited. It was only when he learned how to take care of himself, what to eat, etc., that he was cured. This information he here sets forth for others to profit by, believing that people can be cured at home, if they will follow the directions of a good physician and the common sense advice in this little book.

Savile, Fk. M. The pursuit; with il. by Herman Pfeiffer. Bost., Little, Brown, 1910. c. 317 p. D. cl., $1.50.

For the opening scene of this virile story Mr. Savile takes us to romantic Tangier, where, on the main street, John Aylmer, in garrison at Gibraltar, prevents an attempt to kidnap an American child, who, he later finds out, is heir to millions in America. Successive chapters deal with the further pursuit of this American boy, who has for a guardian the most alluring of heroines, and who in turn is watched over and protected by the manly young soldier. The chase leads through Spain and Tangier, and is ended in Messina at the time of the earthquake, the villain of the tale being the child's degenerate father, whose plots are all frustrated, and who meets a well-deserved fate. Sienkiewicz, Henryk. Whirlpools; a novel of modern Poland; tr. from the Polish by Max A. Drezmal. Bost., Little, Brown, 1910. c. 390 p. D. cl., $1.50.

This is a tale quite as interesting as any the author has yet written of Polish rural life. The death of an uncle brings under one roof distant relatives as mourners—two young Polish cousins and a supposedly English friend, Miss Auney. The hero, Ladislaus Krzycki, falls in love with her, and their engagement with its subsequent breaking-off is the main theme of the book. Minor plots are interwoven; Socialism and its mob-force brings a tragedy into their midst, and although a little sad it is a most probable presentation of many admirable characters who are, each, not without the humanness of weakness.

These essays are by an English poet little known here. His life was tragic, an early quarrel with his father threw him on the world, almost penniless and with feeble health. He went up to London and there his life was one of destitution, his lack of physical strength making manual labor impossible to him; he sold matches in the streets. From this life of hardship and want he was rescued by Mr. and Mrs. Meynell, but tuberculosis had developed and he died in a London hospital in 1907 at the age of forty-seven. Some of the essays are: A renegade poet on the poet; Crashaw; Aubrey de Vere; William Ernest Henley; Pope; Don Quixote; Finis coronat opus, etc.

Physical, mental and moral happiness is necessary for people to work with the greatest efficiency. The book is devoted to the consideration of how to gain this happiness, the subject being treated under four divisions: part 1, The problem of happiness and its physical aspects; part 2, Mental aspects of the problem of happiness; part 3, Social aspects of the problem of happiness; part 4, Moral aspects of the problem of happiness. These four parts are subdivided under more specific heads, each of which is treated in a stimulating, helpful manner. The editor is not responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications. Publishers should send books promptly for weekly record and descriptive annotation, if possible in advance of publication. The Record of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

PAPER AND ITS MATERIALS.

In the House of Representatives last week an amendment was carried in the Sundry Civil appropriation bill, on motion of Representative Mann, of Illinois, authorizing the expenditure of $30,000 by the Secretary of Agriculture to test such plants and woods as he may believe would prove valuable for making paper. This was offered and adopted in the belief that the destruction of forests at wholesale, acres being destroyed for the production of a single newspaper, might be averted by the development of other fibres for paper making purposes.

Possibly new industries, indeed, may spring up as the result of a practical up-to-date investigation through the forestry service and the chemical experts. It is interesting to note that the remote country of Yucatan is becoming one of the richest states in Mexico because of the development of the Sisal industry, which produces the "green gold of Yucatan."

A slight study of books on paper making and of the patent records of this in other countries suggests at once the wide range of possibilities in this direction and the fact that almost every conceivable kind of fibre has been suggested for paper making. But most of these suggestions were before the development of modern industrial chemistry, and the new light that may now be thrown upon the subject may quite change the situation.

In connection with the materials of paper, the importance of paper testing both of material and method of manufacture may also usefully be emphasized. Much literature has recently come to the front on this subject, and in the next issue of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY we shall present some interesting reports and data in this field, which are of very large practical importance to book as well as to newspaper publishers.

THE publication of Mrs. Humphry Ward's latest novel simultaneously under three entirely different titles, in the American, English and French editions, respectively, calls attention to a bibliographical nuisance which publishers, of all people, should recognize and guard against. When further, however, a publisher takes a published novel which has outlived its usefulness, and, by a little perfunctory revision and a skilfully contrived new title, tacitly palms it off as a new novel, the practice comes dangerously close to the border-line of fraud.

Nor is it adequate excuse, as was made, we believe, in a recent case in point, that, while the earlier book was the original novel, the later one was a novelization of the dramatized form of the original! The purchaser, unless very carefully warned, is going to be fooled; and is going to buy a disguised re-working of a book he has already read. Rest assured he will not do that many times without very emphatic protest!

With translated titles there may be some excuse; though why René Bazin's "De Tout Son Ame" ("With All His Soul"), must become "Redemption," or his "Les Noellets" ("The Noellets") must be in English "This, My Son" we fail to see. But against Cleveland Moffett's "A King in Rags" of 1908 becoming "The Battle" in 1909; or against Mrs. Ward's "Lady Merton, Colonist" being "Canadian Born" in England, and "George Anderson" in France, booksellers, librarians and bibliophiles may well enter a protest.

It is with regret that we note the retirement from the general trade of the name of Armstrong, so honorably associated with it since the days when Arthur C. Armstrong was the leading member of the firm of Scribner, Armstrong & Co., before he founded the house of A. C. Armstrong & Son, which has continued through three generations. The Armstrong house has passed over its general list of books to another firm, and will hereafter confine itself to the specialty of a religious encyclopedia. Those who have knowledge of the history of the booktrade remember the honored figure of the elder Armstrong, and it is pleasant to think that the house he founded has been continued by his son and grandson.

THE PERPETUAL "BEST-SELLERS."

A WRITER in the current number of the World's Work has some interesting statistics on the "standard" best-sellers, statistics which have not the novelty for the bookseller which they have for the general public, but which, nevertheless, are of interest. The figures quoted are from the stockbook of "one of the most prominent and successful of the firms which are making a specialty of books at low cost," and may therefore be taken as to a certain extent, though of course very roughly, typical of comparative sales. The writer estimates the sales of "rebind" fiction, by the way, at four million copies a year.

"John Halifax, Gentleman," leads the list of this house's sales of miscellaneous novels which are old favorites with 4230 copies, with "Lorna Doone," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Last Days of Pompeii," "Pride and Prejudice," "Thaddeus of Warsaw" and "Jane Eyre" following in the order named. "John Halifax" is exceeded, however, by "Ivanhoe," 7204 copies; "The Last of the Mohicans," 4844, and "The Deerslayer," 4788, and "Oliver Twist" 4645 and "David Copperfield" 8281 copies, which figure seems to give the latter book first place among the so-called standard novels. For a partial explanation of the sales of "Ivanhoe" and "The Last of the Mohicans" it must be remembered that both these (and several others mentioned by the writer) are on the lists of books required for college entrance, this stimulating what might be called an artificial demand. One is, however, surprised that "Ben-Hur" nowhere appears; have the sales of this perennial favorite fallen off?

The best-sellers of Scott, aside from "Ivanhoe," are "Kenilworth" 3228, and, rather surprisingly, "Old Mortality" 1049; and of Dickens, beside "Oliver Twist" and "David Copperfield," "Old Curiosity Shop" 3048, "Pickwick Papers" 1717, and "Little Dorrit" 1415. Cooper's favorites are not so pronounced, running "The Last of the Mohicans" 4844, "The Deerslayer" 4788, "The Pathfinder" 4395, and "The Prairie" 3178. George Eliot and Thackeray are lower down in the scale of popular favor: the one with "Romola" 2068, "Silas Marner" 2067, and "Adam Bede" 2018; the other with "Vanity Fair" 1679, "Henry Esmond" 1658, and "The Virginians" 1150.

For younger readers the favorites seem to be "Treasure Island" 6050, "Tom Brown's School Days" 4663, and "Swiss Family Robinson" 4347. Just why "Robinson Crusoe" itself is not in the list is not apparent.

Longfellow is the most popular poet, with Tennyson, Burns, Meredith's "Lucile" and Browning following in this order. Emerson is by far the most popular essayist and Franklin's "Autobiography" the most popular biography.

The writer seems astounded by the sales of the Horatio Alger books, which, based on 1909 sales, he estimates at ten million copies in the last ten years at a minimum of twenty-five cents a copy. This is probably very greatly exaggerated. The appearance, in 1909, of the New York Book Company's Alger Series at ten cents, not twenty-five, greatly increased the sales for that year.

COLONIAL SALES OF ENGLISH BOOKS.

IN the report of the Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland was this statement:

"At the request of the Authors' Society, who complained of a great drop in the sale of Colonial editions, a committee was appointed to investigate this matter. The Authors' Society were, however, unable to substantiate the statement that there had been an unusual drop or to bring any tangible evidence on the subject, though it was suggested that the reduction, if any, in Colonial sales was due to the production of cheap cloth reprints, and this opinion has recently been emphasized by one of our New Zealand agents."

In a recent number of The Author the Authors' Society replies to this at some length. It is not quite true, it says, that the Authors' Society was unable to substantiate the statement mentioned. It never endeavored to do so. The point to which it did draw attention was not that there was a great drop in the Colonial sales, but that there ought to have been a great increase in past years, considering the large markets that are covered, and that there had been no sign of such increase. Many statements of account come to the society's office, and it is curious to notice how small are the Colonial sales compared with the sales in England. It is quite evident that something is wrong. The publishers are inclined to think that the fault does not lie with them, but the result of the inquiries made by the society in Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Canada tends to show that the English publishers are exceedingly slack in pushing the Colonial sales, while the travelling agents of the great American houses are constantly present, pushing their wares into all out of the way corners as well as in the more familiar places. We are inclined to think that it is not the cheap reprints so much as the energy of the American book agent that accounts for the lack of circulation of English books in the Colonial markets.

We feel bound, however, to give considerable weight to the opinion of one of the foremost publishers in England. He states distinctly, in a letter lying before us, that it is the cheap sevenpenny editions that are killing the Colonial sales, as the Colonial booksellers refuse to stock Colonial editions which are liable to be undersold at any moment. At the beginning of last year the society issued a circular with regard to the sevenpenny reprints and recommended that their publication should be delayed as long as possible, if not altogether abandoned, after the publication of the six-shilling edition. If the publisher's opinion is correct, it would be as well to insist that the sevenpenny reprint should not be exported to the Colonies.

A "LITTLE BOOK SHOP" THAT HAS MADE GOOD.

"EDITH SEARS: HER SHOP," is the legend stamped on one of the doors of a white tiled business block on Fifty-fifth Street, Chicago, near the University, which admits to "The Little Bookshop," a place spoken of almost with affection by University folk, faculty as well as students. Everybody goes there for new books, distinctive note paper, pictures raised," which she brings over in the fall from her farm in South Haven, Mich. When Mrs. Sears first became a business woman she had the farm, the summer home of the family, and by cultivating this and making it a summer resort she was able to educate her son and see him graduated from Yale.

When her son was well launched on his career as architect, Mrs. Sears felt herself free to indulge her own tastes a bit. She came to Chicago and served a sort of ap-framed just a little different from the ordinary, and so forth.

Mrs. Sears's taste is evidenced in all its arrangements. Such a pretty, home little store it is, done in browns and yellows, with low tables, sales cases and shelves. The acme of comfort is reached when the patron finds himself in the back of the shop. Snuggled down in one of the big easy chairs by the wide library table, the visitor can read at ease, or let his eyes feast on restful, soft toned prints, old paintings, or the dull shimmer of brass bowls filled with pussywillows. Here and there a leopard skin thrown over a table or chair strikes another accent of individuality.

All her life, at least all of her life since she was forced to think of self-support, Mrs. Sears has had a desire to own a little book shop in some quiet university town. Her dream of owning the book shop has been fulfilled, though not in a small town.

Mrs. Sears is really, first of all, a practical farmer. As she says, a part of her fall stock-in-trade is "arts and crafts potatoes, hand prenticeship at the book business. It was not definitely in her mind then to do something with this training, but books were one of the greatest interests in her life, and she naturally gravitated towards them.

One day in 1908, when she was without a position, and wondering what to do, she paid a visit out to the University, and friends there asked her why she did not open a gift shop somewhere around the campus. In one month "The Little Book Shop" was ready for business. Mrs. Sears lived in the back of her shop until the requirements of the picture framing business which had grown up—such an enterprise not having been originally in her plans—drove her out of her quarters behind the shop and obliged her to take a flat upstairs.

Mrs. Sears has been successful, but she is not inclined to minimize the amount of hard work establishing a business requires nor the necessity of capital. She started on $500, and has added more as the business developed. No small item of her success has been an extensive acquaintance.

ANALYZING BOOKSTORE EXPENSES.

IN consonance with a recent editorial in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY on analyzing profit and expense, the American Stationer has just printed a summarized code of rules for analyzing expense which are so apt and succinct as to be of value to every bookseller.

It says, with THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, that the correct figuring of costs is a most vital part of business, and makes these suggestions:

1. Charge interest on the net amount of your total investment at the beginning of your business, exclusive of real estate.
2. Charge rental on all real estate or buildings owned by you and used in your business at a rate equal to that which you would receive if renting or leasing it to others.
3. Charge, in addition to what you pay for hired help, an amount equal to what your services would be worth to others. Also treat in like manner the services of any member of your family employed in the business, but not on your regular pay roll.
4. Charge depreciation on all goods carried over on which you may have to make a less price because of change in style, damage or any other cause.
5. Charge depreciation on buildings, tools, fixtures or anything else suffering from age or wear and tear.
6. Charge amounts donated or subscriptions paid.
7. Charge all fixed expenses, such as taxes, insurance, water, light, fuel, etc.
8. Charge all incidental expenses, such as drayage, postage, office supplies, livery or expense of keeping horses and wagons, telegrams and telephones, advertising, canvassing, etc.
9. Charge losses of every character, including goods stolen or sent out and not charged, allowances made customers, bad debts, etc.
10. Charge collection expense.
11. Charge any other expense not enumerated above.
12. When you have ascertained what the sum of all the foregoing items amounts to, prove it by your books and you will have your total expense for the year. Then divide this figure by the total of your sales and it will show the per cent. which it has cost you to do business.

SELLING FOUNTAIN PENS TO DEAD MEN.

The American Stationer warns its readers against a new swindle (not at all impossible in bookselling) which, for sheer novelty, beats anything in some time—selling fountain pens to dead men.

The inventor of the dodge operated under the name of the Imperial Fountain Pen Company. Going every day to the public library, he got the files of the newspapers from all over the country, and picked out promising death notices.

He then marked a gold-plated band on a fountain pen with the dead man's name and sent it to him. The letter stated the pen "ordered some time ago" was inclosed, apologized for the slight delay in sending it, hoped it would prove satisfactory in every way, and asked for a remittance of $2. The pens cost him 60 cents each.

He sent a pen to "Henry Curtif," of Chicago. The real name of the dead man was Curtis. It had been misprinted in the "ad." Curtis's family, suspicious, notified the postal authorities.

GEORGE H. DORAN COMPANY PURCHASE BUSINESS OF A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON.

THE unification of the interests of Hodder & Stoughton, represented in the United States by George H. Doran Company, through the acquisition by purchase of the long-established publishing business of A. C. Armstrong & Son, is officially announced.

The same high standard which has characterized the publications of each house will be maintained, and patrons will be served with increased efficiency.

The combined catalogue of publications of Hodder & Stoughton and A. C. Armstrong & Son will be found to contain many of the great religious and theological publications of the past half century. With all the literary and publishing resources of both firms at their command, Hodder & Stoughton cannot fail to attain in the United States that same high place that the extent and worth of their publications have secured for them in Great Britain. The business will be operated in America by the corporation of George H. Doran Company, over the imprint of Hodder & Stoughton, and it is a pleasure to announce that A. C. Armstrong & Son will continue to be identified with the business as shareholders. A. C. Armstrong & Son will conclude the publication of Alexander MacLaren's "Expositions of Holy Scripture" as a distinct enterprise.

COMMUNICATION.

BADEN-POWELL'S "SCOUTING FOR BOYS."

NEW YORK, June 6, 1910.

WE understand that a literary agency has been offering for American issue General Baden-Powell's book, "Scouting for Boys." We have the assurance of General Baden-Powell that this is done without his authorization and against his wish, and that he will give his sanction to no American reprint except the one in collaboration with Ernest Thompson Seton which we are now preparing.

In addition, the English volume contains a large amount of copyrighted material by Mr. Seton, which could not be published in the United States without infringing on the latter's rights and ours. It seems only proper, therefore, to put the matter frankly before all of our friends in the trade.

Very truly yours,

"Do not disparage rivals, nor run down another man's goods. If you do not know what to say, say nothing. To repeat an unkind remark is as bad as to invent a lie."

July 23.—Macmillan vs. Scribner; R. Appleton vs. Century; D. Appleton vs. Literary Digest.

SATURDAY'S GAMES.

On Saturday afternoon, May 28, the team of Charles Scribner's Sons had an easy time in defeating a team representing Frank A. Munsey Company, at Van Cortland Park, by the following score:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	Total
Munsey....	0	1	0	0	2	0	2	1	x	6
Scribners....	0	1	6	6	7	5	2	x	x	27

Battery for Munsey, Smith and Gleizer; for Scribner's, Hettinger and Mitchell.

Saturday, June 4, saw a reversal of form in the results of the two games played in the league. Scribner's strong team was defeated by R. Appleton by the score of 3 to 2. The victors in Saturday's contest must have improved wonderfully since May 7, when they were defeated by a large score at the hands of the Literary Digest team.

Century took D. Appleton into camp by a score of 14 to 2. D. Appleton have been picked as one of the first division teams, and it would not be surprising to see them up among the headliners at the end of the season despite their showing last Saturday.

Macmillan forfeited to the Literary Digest, leaving the latter in first place and remaining in the cellar themselves. A glance at the standing of the clubs shows how one game one way or the other will swing teams in and out of the coveted first position.

OBITUARY NOTES.

SYDNEY PORTER, better known by his pen-name of O. Henry, died at the Polyclinic Hospital, New York City, on June 5. Mr. Porter had been suffering from a complication of diseases, though it was only a few days before his death that he gave up work and went to the hospital, where an operation was performed, but without avail. Born forty-three years ago in Greensboro, N. C., Sydney Porter had only a common school education and a considerable reading of the classics as his preparation for a literary life. His health was poor when a boy, preventing his going to college, and he was sent to Texas to the Lee Hall cattle ranch for two years. Here he gathered much material which he used later in his short stories. After leaving the cattle country he went to Houston and got a position on The Post at $15 a week. Within two weeks he was receiving $20, and in another two weeks $25. Next he bought Brann's Iconoclast and ran it for about two years as a weekly, changing the name to the Rolling Stone. Two years were spent in South America, where he drifted about, but made no success in the fruit raising which he undertook. It was in New Orleans that Mr. Porter decided to take a pen-name, and hit upon Henry while running through the society column in a newspaper. Many of his stories were returned to him, but he always sent them off again unchanged. It is eight years since he came to New York, and during that time he had made a tremendous success, receiving for his stories in the magazines unusually large sums. While he could and did write tales in perfect English, he also made slang really funny. Among the best known of his books are "Cabbages and Kings," "Options," "The Four Million," "The Trimmed Lamp," "The Heart of the West." His latest book, "Strictly Business," appeared this spring. At the time of his death he was engaged on a long novel, but only a few pages had been written.

DR. ELIZABETH BLACKWELL, who founded the New York Infirmary for Women and Children and the Woman's Medical College, and who had practiced medicine in England since 1859, died on June 1, at her residence, Rock House, Hastings. She was born in Bristol, England, 1821, and came to this country in 1832. She was an ardent abolitionist, and while teaching school in Kentucky was brought into direct contact with slavery. Holding the views she did her position soon became impossible. When she decided to study medicine the large medical schools in New York refused her admission, as did also twelve country colleges, the school at Geneva, N. Y., at last admitting her. As a pioneer in her profession, she met with many difficulties and hardships, but finally succeeded in winning recognition for herself. At the time of the Civil War Dr. Blackwell started the National Sanitary Aid Association. She returned to England in 1869, practicing in London and Hastings. She founded the National Health Society of London and assisted in founding the London School of Medicine for Women. Besides lecturing on medical and educational topics Dr. Blackwell wrote many books and pamphlets, among them "The Moral Education of the Young," "The Human Element in Sex," "The Influence of Women in Medicine," "Pioneer Work in Opening the Medical Profession to Women" and "The Physical Education of Girls."

GOLDWIN SMITH died June 7 at the age of eighty-six, at The Grange, his home in Toronto, Canada. Born in Reading, England, August 23, 1823, Professor Smith received his education at Eton and Oxford, winning distinction as an undergraduate at Magdalen College and carrying off many honors in classics. He was called to the English Bar in 1847, but the life of a barrister did not offer a broad enough field and he turned his attention to journalism, contributing regularly to the London Saturday Review and London Daily News and other papers. From 1858-66 Mr. Smith was Regius Professor of Modern History at Oxford, visiting the United States in 1864, but returning to England to his educational work. His intense interest in the Civil War and Reconstruction period led him to this country once more, and he accepted the chair of English Constitutional History at Cornell University, where he remained until 1871, when he gave up active work in the university, becoming Professor Emeritus. He then went to Toronto to live, and there married Mrs. Harriet Boulton, who died in 1909. Among Dr. Smith's best known works may be mentioned "Does the Bible Sanction American Slavery?" (1863), "History of the United States" (1893), "The United Kingdom" (1899), "Irish History and the Irish Question" (1905).

STEPHEN VAN RENSSELAER FORD, a Methodist author, editor, composer and critic, and a member of one of the oldest families in the central part of New York State, died June 7 at his home, No. 556 West 184th Street, New York City. He was seventy-four years old, and had been in ill health for five years. Mr. Ford was born in Greenville, N. Y. He was for many years connected with the Methodist Book Concern, at No. 150 Fifth Avenue, and was editor of "The Methodist Year Book," "The General Minutes," "International Services Pronouncing Bibles," and assistant editor of The Methodist Review. Among his compositions were "Melodies for Little People," "Imperial Songs" and "Junior League Songster." During the Civil War he composed battle hymns which were sung by the Union armies.

THE death is announced from London of Edward Jenkins, whose brilliant pamphlet, "Ginx's Baby," ridiculing the British Poor law, created a tremendous sensation thirty or forty years ago. Mr. Jenkins was born in India in 1838, received his education at McGill University and the University of Pennsylvania, was called to the English bar at Lincoln's Inn, became agent-general for Canada and entered the British Parliament as a Liberal Imperialist, but drifted into the Conservative ranks. He once contested Truro against Gladstone, but lost. When he died he was editor of the Overland Mail and the Home-ward Mail. Though the author of other books, it is by "Ginx's Baby" that he is best known.

EDWARD J. SWARTZ, for many years editor of the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph, died at his home in that city on June 4. In addition to his newspaper work, which extended over forty-four years, Mr. Swartz devoted himself to playwriting. McKee Rankin, James O'Neil, Amy Lee, Annie Pixley and other actors and actresses of prominence appeared in his plays. Among his dramatic works were "A Square Man," "Dad's Girl," "Princess Chuck," "The Governess," "Our Angel," "The Kaffir Diamond," "The Envoy," "Bossett's Fairy," "The Clipper" and "The Syndicate." Mr. Swartz was born in Buffalo sixty-two years ago and came to Philadelphia in 1866.

MARY ELIZABETH DEWEY died in Boston on June 4, at the age of eighty-nine. She was the translator of George Sand's "Miller of Angibault," and the editor of "Life and Letters of Catherine M. Sedgwick" and "Autobiography and Letters of Orville Dewey."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

HERETOFORE no announcement has been made as to the name "Georg Schock," author of the new novel, "Hearts Contending," save that it was the nom de plume of a feminine writer living in Pennsylvania. "Georg Schock" is in reality Miss Katherine Loose and her home is Reading. She has written short stories which have attracted attention in Harper's Magazine, but this is her first novel. Unlike her stories, "Hearts Contending" is not written in dialect, although its characters are the same sturdy Berks County Germans.

T. A. DALY, whose verses in Italian dialect have won him well-deserved fame throughout the United States, is to be given the degree of Doctor of Letters by Fordham College at its next Commencement. Mr. Daly's last volume, "Carmina" (John Lane Company), contained not only verses in Italian dialect, but songs of the transplanted Irish and a few poems in English. In all three branches of verse Mr. Daly has attained eminence, but as the poet of the "dago" he is unique. Mr. Daly responded to one of the toasts at the last convention banquet of the American Booksellers' Association in a way that will be long remembered by every bookseller present.

WILLIAM DEVEREUX, co-author with Stephen Lovell in the novelization of their successful play, "Sir Walter Raleigh," was an actor as well as a playwright. His first professional appearance was made in 1890, and the stage on which he appeared was no less an important one than the Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon. For the first three years of his career he acted exclusively in Shakespeare, but later toured largely and acted in almost every form of the drama. Mr. Devereux has been most happy in writing plays around well-known historical characters, and has had produced with great success "Robin Hood," "Henry of Navarre," and his latest play, "Sir Walter Raleigh," upon which the novel "Raleigh," published by the Lippincotts this spring, was founded.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

FREDERICK J. DRAKE, Chicago, has published F. Maire's "Modern Painters' Cyclo-pedia," dealing with the industrial side of the painter's art in clear and exhaustive manner.

LORD & THOMAS, Trude Building, Wabash Avenue and Randolph Street, Chicago, have brought out their Pocket Directory of the American Press for 1910, as usual fully revised and brought up to date.

THE title of James Lane Allen's forthcoming book, hitherto announced as "A Brood of the Eagle," has been changed. It is now given out as "The Doctor's Christmas Eve" (Macmillan). Unfortunately most booksellers will probably consider the change anything but one for the better.

A. M. ROBERTSON, San Francisco, publishes a pretty little boxed volume entitled "Woman's Eyes," being verses translated from the Sanskrit by Arthur William Ryder, assistant professor of Sanskrit in the University of California and dedicated to Irving Stringham, the mathematician.

A TIMELY publication is "King Edward VII. as a Man and a Monarch," a memorial address delivered at Trinity Episcopal Church, Columbus, Ohio, May 15, 1910, by James Boyle, formerly United States Consul, Liverpool, England. The pamphlet may be had from A. H. Smythe, Columbus, Ohio.

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY have just published "The Good of Life and Other Little Essays," by William Cleaver Wilkinson, professor of poetry and criticism in the University of Chicago. There are fifty-six of these little essays, and the keynote of them all is genial, kindly, contagious humor.

B. W. HUEBSCH will issue shortly "Daily Ways to Health," by Mrs. Emily M. Bishop and Gwyneth K. Roe. Mrs. Bishop's first book, "Seventy Years Young," continues its steady sale, and she is still working as convincingly as ever among the young women of Chautauqua and elsewhere teaching them how to be strong and happy.

THE first volume of General Weyler's long-promised memoirs has been published in Madrid. The book is entitled "My Rule in Cuba," and the Captain General is expected to make important revelations. The work consists of four volumes, but the volume which has just appeared does not reach the explosion on the Maine or the Cuban war.

JOHN W. LUCE, Boston, has just brought out a most interesting volume on "Maurice Hewlett," in which Milton Bronner, author of "Letters from the Raven," gives a critical review of Hewlett's prose and poetry, also some facts concerning the life of this man, whose books have come to be recognized as events of more than ordinary importance.

FORBES & Co. have now ready "The Life of John Albert Johnson," by Frank A. Day and Theodor M. Knappen, who highly appreciated what this man, who was three times Governor of Minnesota, stood for in the hearts of the people. His premature death is almost a national bereavement, for his was a career of great and increasing possibilities.

THE (English) Bookseller states that the sale of the first issues of Nelson's two-shilling novels is proving very satisfactory, reprints of two out of the three having been required already. The same house, with amazing enterprise, brought out, within a week of his death, a "Life of King Edward VIII," in their sevenpenny library, written in popular but accurate form, well illustrated and printed, and appropriately bound in royal purple.

"MILTON'S CENTENARY" is the title of a modest and tastefully printed address delivered by Professor Henry A. Beers on the occasion of the poet's three hundredth birthday, before the Modern Language Club of Yale University, and now appearing with the imprint of the Yale University Press. It is a cordial appraisal of the writer's qualities both as a poet and a man. There are only two hundred copies, printed from type, and it is expected that the little book will not long remain in print.

JOHN LANE COMPANY have just ready "Simon the Jester," W. J. Locke's new novel. It is as whimsical as "Septimus," and tells how Simon de Gex, after learning from the doctor that he can live but a few months, decides to spend the time in eumoiety (the attainment of happiness through altruism). He does many quixotic things, then regains his health and has to face the consequences of his good acts, which seem to be quite as dire as if he had taken to evil courses. Mr. Locke handles this situation with all his usual charm and humor.

THE utility of Bishop Meade's great work, "Old Churches and Families of Virginia," known and read of all who are interested in the history and genealogy of America, was greatly lessened by the want of a proper index. This want is now met perfectly by the publication of a "Digested Index and Genealogical Guide," which was compiled by Jennings Cropper Wise and is now issued by the Lippincotts. Wise's Index is absolutely full and accurate, and its appearance should be welcome news to students and to the tracers of records.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, who was reported in Monday's papers as having been robbed of $25,000 by a Milan pickpocket, immediately wrote a letter of denial to the London papers declaring the story to be a "ridiculous invention." He said he has not been out of England or France since arriving in Europe; and stated in the most vigorous language of annoyance that papers which would publish such a canard were quite beneath contempt so far as news value was concerned. Among the papers which reported the alleged theft was his own New York American!

CASSELL & COMPANY have new editions of their "Standard German-English Dictionary" and "Standard French-English Dictionary." Both books have been revised and enlarged, giving thousands of idioms, proverbs, quotations, colloquialisms, etc. Purchasers are warned against editions of these dictionaries which unscrupulous dealers are supplying and which have been printed from worn plates twenty years old, which were originally photographed from Cassell's first editions. This house has arranged for a very complete list of juveniles for the fall trade, and will be glad to furnish information concerning them.

L. C. PAGE & COMPANY, Boston, have just published a timely addition to art literature in Mrs. Julia deW. Addison's new excellently illustrated volume, "The Boston Museum of Fine Arts." This is the second volume in Page's Art Galleries of America Series, the first of which was David C. Preyer's "The Art of the Metropolitan Museum of New York." Mrs. Addison is a recognized authority on art subjects, and has already written "The Art of the National Gallery" (London), "The Art of the Dresden Gallery," etc. This book is based on personal observation and careful critical study of Boston's magnificent new treasure house.

A NEW and clever device is the Flexible Book Rest and Copy Holder, for which R. E. Sherwood is the selling agent. It is constructed entirely of steel, and has a flexible bottom or seat which forms itself without adjustments of any kind to any chair or couch. It is made in a simple yet mechanical way, and can be so adjusted that one can read a book or paper at any desired angle or height with perfect ease and comfort. As a copy holder it is the simplest, most convenient, practical and satisfactory one on the market. It requires no attachments of any kind; it increases speed twenty-five per cent., prevents all awkward positions, saves eyes and nerves, allows copy to be focussed at any height or angle, and can be used with any kind of machine.

THE publications of the Macmillan Company for the week ending June 11 are "Governmental Action for Social Welfare," a new work in the American Social Progress Series, by Jeremiah W. Jenks, professor of political economy at Cornell University; "The Teaching Botanist," a new, extensively revised and enlarged edition by W. F. Ganong, professor at Smith College; "Elements of United States History," by Edward Channing; "High and By-Ways in Buckinghamshire," by Clement Shorter, with illustrations by Frederick L. PICK-UPS.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, according to the recent biography by Dr. Lorenzo Sears, was, on one occasion, lecturing in Ohio, and while on a railroad journey, going to keep one of his appointments, he met in the car a crowd of clergy returning from some sort of convention. One of the ministers felt called upon to approach Mr. Phillips, and asked him: "Are you trying to free the niggers?" "Yes, sir; I am an abolitionist." "Well, why do you preach your doctrines up here? Why don't you go over into Kentucky?" "Excuse me, are you a preacher?" "I am, sir." "Are you trying to save souls from hell?" "Yes, sir; that's my business." "Well, why don't you go there?" The assailant hurried into the smoker amid a roar of laughter.

Life publishes the following "Books They May Have Written":

Books Wanted

Under this head booktrade subscribers, under their own names, are given five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertisement for books out of print in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding 100 lines a year. If over five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line. Books not out of print, repeated matter, and all advertisements from non-subscribers, cost 10 cents a line. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noticed.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm-name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY, does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withdrawing their use from irresponsible advertisers, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

The Historians and The English Reformation

By the Rev. JOHN S. LITTELL

The misrepresentations of English Church history which appear so frequently in the secular Histories of England, and especially in School Histories, can no longer go unchallenged. Thinking Churchmen have taken steps to stop such misrepresentation. Resolutions on the subject are being passed by ecclesiastical bodies. Questions are being asked. School authorities are making inquiries. Parents are insisting that their children should not be taught a garbled Roman Catholic version of English history in the public schools. 8vo, cloth, $2.50 net. Postage 18 cents.

WARNING

To the Trade

In the Matter of the Cassell Language Dictionaries

A School-book Agent recently had this experience: Receiving a School order for 42 copies each of Cassell's French-English and German-English Dictionaries, he filled the order, to make the little extra profit, with the reprint editions issued by a reprint house. These editions were printed from plates 20 years old, which were originally photographed from our first editions, long out of print. The Principal of the School complained, naturally, that the books were out of date, the plates worn out, many words illegible, binding and paper poor. These books are now on the Agent's hands and he has come to us, as he says, emphatically, "for the genuine editions of Cassell's Dictionaries which the Principal wants, and no other."

"GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

has made a contribution to the relatively small quantity of fiction that an unprejudiced judgment can declare worthy of permanence. . . . Not even Balzac has more carefully or thoroughly portrayed a certain type of social parasite than Mr. McCutcheon has done. . . .

"THE BUTTERFLY MAN"

is worth all the romances of the 'Graustark' type that Mr. McCutcheon could write in the course of his natural life. It is a real contribution to the 'American Human Comedy.'—Philadelphia Press.
